FLORISTIC OBSERVATIONS ON FOREST TYPES IN WESTERN SURINAME. II.

BY

P. J. M. MAAS

(Communicated by Prof. J. LANJOUW at the meeting of January 30, 1971)

H. Rain forest at Kamisa falls (Nickerie R., west bank) (see table 8)
7 plots of 1000 m<sup>2</sup> and 21 plots of 100 m<sup>2</sup>, total area 9100 m<sup>2</sup>.

- Number of species: ca 110.
- Soil: brown to grey, loamy sand, occasionally with ferrite gravel.
- Dominant species: Dicorynia guianensis (basralokus).
- Shrub layer: saplings of gawetri (Sapindaceae spp.), tingimoni (Protium spp.), boegoe-boegoe (Swartzia spp.), and switi boontje (Inga spp.); many palms, viz. Attalea maripa (maripa), Oenocarpus bacaba (koemboe), nanai-maka (Bactris vs. humilis), and taspalm (Geonoma vs. baculifera).
- Herb layer: kleine paloeloe (Heliconia sp.), warimbo (Marantaceae spp.) and Renealmia gracilis O. G. Pet. (masoesa).

There was only one dominant tree species in this forest, namely Dicorynia guianensis, forming 12% of all trees with a diameter of 10 cm or over. This species, however, was very unevenly distributed being well represented in a few quadrats, but entirely absent in many others.

The maximum diameters recorded in the area were for Vochysia tomentosa (85 cm), Dicorynia guianensis (90 cm), Gouania glabra (95 cm), Dimorphandra pullei (130 cm), and agro-bigi (Parkia pendula or Parkia ulei var. surinamensis, 150 cm).

The Papilionaceae had a very high percentage in this forest (see table 10), namely 22%, mainly due to the large number of trees of Dicorynia guianensis and boegoe-boegoe (Swartzia spp.); two other leading families were Lecythidaceae (13%) and Chrysobalanaceae (12%).

This forest matches the Winana Creek and Snake Creek rain forest in three of its common species, Eschweilera corrugata, Licania apetala, and switi boontje (Inga spp.). A striking difference, however, is the complete absence of both Aspidosperma excelsum and Eperua falcata and the presence of Dicorynia guianensis and boegoe-boegoe (Swartzia spp.).

K. Upland rain forest at Blanche Marie falls (Nickerie R., east bank) (see table 9), 9 plots of 1000 m<sup>2</sup> and 31 plots of 100 m<sup>2</sup>, total area 12.100 m<sup>2</sup>,

- Number of species: ca 110 (see also fig. 2).
- Soil: dark brown sand, with fine to coarse ferro-bauxite; bedrock of granitic composition.

(10908), Ichnanthus panicoides Beauv. (10985), Thelypteris abrupta (Desv.) Proctor (10912), Adiantum phyllitidis J. Smith (10974), Tectaria trifoliata (L.) Cav. (10986, above 200 m elevation), "Bolbitis" macrophylla (Kze.) Maxon & Morton (10987), and Cyathea infesta (Kze.) Domin (10988).

Epiphytic ferns: Adiantopsis radiata (L.) Fée (10976), Nephrolepis rivularis (Vahl) Mett. (10975), and Polybotrya caudata Kze. (10989). Saprophytes: Voyria rosea Aubl. (10913), abundant.

— Herb layer on bushed granitic rocks: Selaginella producta Baker (10977), Costus claviger R. Ben. (10905), Drymonia campostyla Lwbg. (10909), Sipanea pratensis Aubl. (10910), Ichnanthus axillaris (Nees) Hitchc. (10911), Costus congestiflorus L. C. Rich. ex Gagnep. (10959), Chrysanthemis rupestris (Bth.) Lwbg. (10961), and Monstera obliqua Miq. (10980).

— Herb layer at more or less open granitic outcroppings: Dioscorea manicorensis Clayton (10978), Dioclea virgata (L. C. Rich.) Amsh. (10979), Aphelandra tetragona (Vahl) Nees (10981), and Maranta divaricata Rosc. (10982).

The abundance of Eschweilera spp. (i.e. E. collina, E. subglandulosa, and E. corrugata) in this forest was very peculiar. SCHULZ (1960) remarked: "the numerical preponderance of Lecythidaceae is characteristic for the majority of upland forests on ferrallitic soils in the northern part of Central Suriname . . ."; the same also holds true for this upland forest in western Suriname. One of the leading trees was the Myrtacea apra-oedoe (10941); a sterile specimen of it could not be identified by the specialist R. McVAUGH. I am not totally sure all trees counted in this area under the name apra-oedoe do belong to the same myrtaceous species, since normally this native name is used for representatives of the Sapotaceae.

The deeply fluted trunks of boegoe-boegoe (Swartzia schomburgkii var. schomburgkii and Swartzia sp., 10904) were very typical of this forest; these two species together constituted ca 14% of all trees > 10 cm in diameter; in the diameter classes over 40 cm, they constituted 19% of all trees.

Some species characteristic for this upland rain forest were: Eschweilera collina, Crudia glaberrima, Ecclinusa guianensis, lele-tiki (Rinorea cf. brevipes), the boegoe-boegoe just mentioned, and kimboto (Pouteria sp.).

Very remarkable was the low amount of trees of Aspidosperma excelsum counting only 3 trees on a total area of 12.100 m<sup>2</sup>! West of the Nickerie River it was one of the most common forest species, east of it it was apparently rare!

The maximum diameters recorded in this area were for Eperua falcata (80 cm), Geissospermum sericeum (80 cm), kimboto (Pouteria sp., 80 cm), boegoe-boegoe (Swartzia sp. 80 and 85 cm), and Trattinickia demerarae (120 cm).

The distribution of the trees over the families gave the following picture (see also table 10): a preponderance of Papilionaceae (21%), Lecythidaceae (20%), and Sapotaceae (15%); as the next important family the Chrysobalanaceae reached a percentage of 4% only. The Apocynaceae did not rank higher than 2%!

Floristically this forest can well be compared with an upland rain forest which has been described by SCHULZ (1960). That forest was situated at Stofbroekoe Mts., a mountain range ca 150 km E of Blanche Marie falls, near Kleine Saramacca R.; the soil of that forest consisted of a red to yellow-red loam, with much ironstone gravel, overlying a very thick (bauxo-) ferrite cuirass. These two forest types share the following species: Swartzia schomburgkii var. schomburgkii, Eschweilera corrugata, kimboto (Pouteria sp.), lele-tiki (Rinorea spp.), Licania apetala, and the palm Astrocaryum sciophilum (boegroe-maka). The Blanche Marie forest differs, however, in the presence of Eperua falcata, Eschweilera collina, Crudia glaberrima, and Ecclinusa guianensis.

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF SOME OF THE MOST COMMON TREE SPECIES OF WESTERN SURINAME

I have studied the geographical distribution of seventeen of the most common tree species of the rain and savanna forest of western Suriname. As sources of information local floras or collection lists of Trinidad, Venezuela, Guyana, Suriname, French Guiana, and Brazil were consulted; an article by DAVIS (1941) on the geographical distribution of Guyanan tree species was also seen. Furthermore I took data from plant material of the Utrecht Herbarium.

Of the seventeen species listed, only one was endemic for Suriname (Licania stricta), 15 species were also collected in Guyana, and 9 in French Guiana. This shows the western flora Suriname to be more closely related to the Guyanan than the French Guianan flora; one must bear in mind, however, that the French Guianan flora at this moment is very insufficiently known; future plant explorations in that country may show the floras of both countries to be more related than suggested here.
